TENNESSEE STATE PARKS

BLEDSOE CREEK STATE PARK

BEST IN THE NATION

Bledsoe Creek State Park

is located on the backwaters of Old Hickory Lake. Surrounded on three sides by water and forest, this 164-acre park offers campers and day-use visitors an opportunity to observe an abundance of songbirds, waterfowl, mammals, reptiles and amphibians, and rare native wildflowers.

Historical Significance

The surrounding community is rich with history; the park was named for settler Isaac Bledsoe, who built a frontier fort close to here in 1779. Bledsoe's Lick provided water and attracted game for Native Americans at Castalian Springs, a large prehistoric Mississippian village, and white settlers, who hunted abundant buffalo. Nearby Wynnewood, an early stagecoach stop, is the largest standing log structure in Tennessee.

Camping

Open year-round, the campground has 46 sites equipped with picnic tables, grills, paved pads and 50 amp electrical connections. Water for each site and a dump station are available during summer months. A handicap accessible bathhouse with showers is available. Pets are allowed, but must be leashed. Reservations are first-come, first-serve. Six primitive sites are available.

Picnic Pavilions and Playgrounds

Two pavilions are available for rent. Shelter 1 can accommodate approximately 50 people. Shelter 2 can accommodate approximately 100 people. Call the Park Office for reservations. There are three playgrounds, four horseshoe pits, volleyball court and a baseball field.

Fishing

Year-round fishing is available. Favorite catches are catfish, crappie, perch, bream, stripe, largemouth and smallmouth bass. A Tennessee Fishing License is required.

Boating

The park has two launch ramps, one at the campground for campers only and one on Zeigler Fort Road for public.

Hiking

There are over six miles of hiking trails ranging from easy to moderate, winding through bottomland and ridgeline forests. The Birdsong Trail is paved and handicap accessible.

Planned Programs

Interpretive programs on a variety of topics are available for all ages upon request in advance.
